

Proposition 35
Refine Coordination Policy and Practice

- I A natural color football on the 3746 kitchen table:

- II Fundamental to Triad development is a capability to construct reference frames characterizing a society and a corollary theory for both tracing its evolution through time and/or transforming to another. This discipline should prove its value in explaining dynamics of intercultural relationships. Although the Triad proposes several hypotheticals with potential, grounding them in a published school of thought should add credibility to the approach. The author's view of "Explaining Culture" in which casual chains are treated read as a companion piece to Mr. Binford's "Constructing Frames of Reference" may provide that grounding.^{1,2}

- III An electrical grounding symbol in a cumulus cloud acknowledged relevance.

- IV A Daliesque image of a feminine hand superimposed on a rear view of a midget wearing denims: A green expanded metal desk, one end on a log, the other obscured: An oak stool: A horse on a lawn and showing its hindquarters: A man with a large blue broom sweeping the ground between his legs: A whistle: A young man signing baseballs.